Schubert's 'Rosamunde' Tonight at High School

Picture the orchestra pit in Point Loma High school's auditorium filled to capacity with musicians producing the sweet strains of Schubert's incomparable music, then you will have only a slight idea of what pleasure is in store for those who attend any of the performances of "Rosamunde."

Augmented by ten pieces from San Diego High school, the combined orchestra will number sixty-one peces, of which twenty are wind instruments, thirty-seven are string instruments, and three are percussion.

Special mention is given Austin Hartvigsen, student director, who has been an able assistant to Mr. Myron Green, musical director.

The following students compose Point Loma High school's orchestra personnel: first violins, Robert Davis, concertmaster; Beverly Bellinger, Olive Keck, Cecelia Martin, Paul Winn; second violins, Bernardine Phifer, Phillip Campbell, Arnold Dewees, Dan Dixon, William Graham, Elizabeth Grayson, Nada Hickley, Leland Oberholzer, Marion Potter, Joyce S ettle, John Wilhoit; violas, Joyce Demarest, Rhoda Fox; cellos, Betty Boone, Nina Kline; bass viols, Janice Demarest, David Sterne; flute, David Bryant; oboe, Mack Graham; clarinets, Harold Depew, Ronald Franco, Richard Xavier. Thursday's program was given to a capacity house and this evening's performance, Friday night, everyone who can should attend for the tickets sell at anominal price and the cast should receive every encouragement.

J. D. CONNER OF ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS IS SPEAKER

Dick Barbour was chairman of the day at Wednesday Kiwanis luncheon with his main speaker J. D. Conner, director of elementary education in San Diego city schools.

Mr. Conner said that history showed man was a long time in arriving at a better way of doing things but that the improvement had been gradual and every generation had shown advancement in all fields. He said there were 450 teachers in the local school system with almost 1,000 on the educational staff and that all were seeking better ways of teaching and a better method for education. A room full of local scenes were displayed, the work of artists employed under SERA at the Lincoln school. These pictures will be used generally to bring to the pupils of the elementary system a better knowledge of industry, especially the industry of San Diego, such as the tuna and other fishing; celery, citrus fruits and other agriculture.

Alfred Rameros. 12-year-old student of the Cabrillo school, gave three very much appreciated piano solos.

Joe Zarick of La Jolla club was a visitor and told of La Jolla's plan for a celebration and entertainment there on June 14th, for the purpose of raising a $5,000 fund to take care of an advertising project for La Jolla during this Exposition year.

Ocean Beach Property Demand Continues Very Good.

More than a dozen houses have been sold in Ocean Beach during the last month we are told, showing property to be in demand in this section, where all improvements of the modern city may be had, and where there are no excessive taxes or assessments.

Most all the street improvement bonds are now getting to be well paid out and the wise property owners of the years gone by have refused to allow Mattoon bonds or other heavy improvement taxes to be levied against any particular district on Point Loma.

C. H. Burns, better known to Beach residents as "Spade" Burns, life guard here, this week closed a deal with the Capital Co., it is reported, and takes over the ownership of 50 feet frontage on Newport avenue, on which is located the Adams' barber shop, the Main Pool Hall and Cline's sheet metal shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Schacteback have purchased a home at 4733 Green street and W. Point Loma Blvd. A friend says good luck "Erm and Mick, you deserve all you get".

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Lehew before leaving for Colorado some time ago, and after already owning some eight or nine residences here, bought the residence at 4770 W. Point Loma Blvd., from the Hannah Mc Means estate, and the Rice property at 2303 Seaside street..

Henry Lancaster, real estate dealer, reports selling four houses on Brighton avenue during the past month, near his old home, also a vacant lot at Cable and Narragansett avenue.

The three-bedroom house at 4796 Muir avenue has been sold to a Mission Beach party as an investment. This house is being repaired and redecorated throughout and will be for rent in another few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Mason have bought the stucco residence at 4858 W. Point Loma Blvd., next door to where they lived a year ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Michels, 1779 Cable street, have let the contract for three stucco cottages on their lots at corner of Narragansett and Cable streets. These will all be rent properties. Each unit will cost about $2,000 and have garage.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Fried bought the three-bedroom stucco home at Loma Portal where they have rented for the past year.

P. M. Burrows, Ocean Beach builder reports he has the contract for Mr. McCutcheon, a new home on Etiwanda street, just off Voltaire, almost a duplicate of the new Rothermel house on Saratoga avenue, with a solarium additional. Burrows has also completed a house at 3035 A street for Miss Margaret Kress, is roofing a house this week for Charles Willis on Mississippi Ave, and is expecting to build another residence on 42nd street. This popular builder says new contracts are now showing up faster than he can conveniently take care of them.

Glamorous State History Depicted In Expo Building

California's glamorous history—ancient and modern—will be comprehensively depicted in colors on large mural paintings to adorn walls of the State Building at the California Pacific International Exposition opening in beautiful Balboa Park on May 29.

A corps of artists under direction of Orville Goldner, art supervisor of the California State building, now is engaged in this work. A large central mural, 32 feet long and 12 feet high, will show all State functions, highways, industries, institutions, the State capital at Sacramento and other outstanding features in picture map style.

This central mural will flanked on the left by another mural, 22 feet long and 12 feet high, devoted to early Californian history, its Indian life and famous missions, and one on the right, similar in size, will delineate present day conditions in the state.

As the 8,000,000 visitors expected at America's Exposition enter the ornate building devoted to California domestic exhibits, they will see a large miniature showing the water resources of the state placed to the left of the main entrance. This miniature, made of wood, cardboard and plaster is 30 feet long and 12 feet wide—the second largest relief map of California ever constructed.

Control of all California water resources, including the Central Valley Water project which extends over an area from Redding to Bakersfield, will be graphically explained.

Directly to the right of the main entrance will be a large display, also in miniature form, prepared by the State Department of Agriculture. Here the visitor will see ranches, dairies and citrus groves in contrast, the good and the bad methods of operation shown side by side. Atop the miniature will be a figure, larger than mansize, symbolic of the inspection, control and other laws of the State Agricultural Department.

In all, 20 large state exhibits covering various phases of industry and agriculture, also natural resources, will be housed in the building. Around the interior walls of the structure will be grouped 58 California county exhibits each one supplied with sectional displays and information. The largest groups of county exhibits will represent central coast counties, San Joaquin counties, Tricounties (Riverside, San Bernardino, Orange), San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, Alameda (including Oakland and Berkeley), and the Redwood Empire which starts at San Francisco and extends to the Oregon border.

The state Indian museum at Sacramento also will have its exhibit, displaying the finest collection of weaving, pottery, carving ond relics done by Californian Indians now extant.

A novel scheme of interior decoration in the State Building will be 40 huge seals of California enterprises to be suspended from trusses 35 feet above the floor. The seals will be done in brilliant colors and will represent phases of industry mining, dairying and citrus growing. The California State Building is 228 feet long, 118 feet wide and was constructed for the California Pacific International Exposition at a cost of $90,000.

NEW STUCCO HOME AT OCEAN BEACH

(San Diego Sun)

An attractive five room stucco home, embodying many clever features is being built for Mr. Whiteside at 4474 Cape May avenue, by the A. L. Dennstedt Co.

A novel innovation in the large living room of this home is a large fireplace made of various colored rocks and petrified wood, quite unusual and striking in appearance. A huge window, flush with the floor in this room, gives a perfect ocean view.

Two bedrooms each side of the tiled bath have very large closets featuring the new wall in-set metal shoe cabinets, which keep shoes ventilated, off the floor and out of the way. The kitchen has tiled sink and gas water heater and electric refrigerator will be installed.

Hundreds of displays will be entered and this year should be an outstanding exhibition of what the amateur gardener can grow in the line of floral offerings, ferns, shrubs, begonias and the dozens of other plants, dear to the heart of the householder.

This show is free. No charge will be made of any kind, either for exhibits, or for admission.

So come and bring your friends and their friends. Enjoy a day, either Saturday or Sunday, with us in the cool refreshing atmosphere of the beach, and see what beautiful garden plants can be grown with little trouble at Ocean Beach.

Chamber of Commerce Plan Pioneer Day

At the meeting of Ocean Beach chamber of commerce held Monday evening the principal matter of business was the resolution asking all organizations of the Beach to send a representative to a mass meeting to be held next Wednesday, at the Woman's clubhouse to appoint a chairman and committees to put on a Pioneer Day celebration and barbecue on June 29th, the Saturday preceding July 4th, the affair to take on much the same proportions as the celebration held last June, honoring the pioneers and old timers here.

Any person interested in this barbecue and old timer's picnic will be welcome at the meeting to discuss plans and arrangements to carry out in a successful manner.

A motion was also made and passed that the chamber of commerce send a letter to the president of the San Diego Street Railway Co., requesting that when the Exposition opens, a bus meet the beach cars at the foot of Laurel street and transport the passengers Exposition bound directly up the hill to the west entrance to the park. This would save a great deal of time and confusion for the visitors and would take a lot of traffic off the hands of the Street Railway company in the downtown section of San Diego.

A committee of four members was appointed to plan contents of a new folder to advertise Ocean Beach.

A resolution was passed instructing the secretary to write Supervisor Ed Hastings in regard to paving the new section of West Point Loma Blvd.

The president also appointed a committee of three members to examine the newly made city budget and see that it contained provision for keeping the beaches clean during the coming summer, and to see what other sections this new budget had which would effect conditions at Ocean Beach.

The newly prepared budget for the next fiscal year has not yet been presented to the city council and those present were of the opinion it would be worth while to learn what it contained.

CAHILL BUSINESS BUILDING SOON TO BE READY

Ed H. Jones, building superintendent in charge of construction of A. E. Cahill's new store building is making good headway with the structure which is now up to the square and making a better appearance of Bacon street at Ocean Beach's business center. Work has gone along very smoothly from the start and occupants can figure on being in their new quarters about June 5th.

Walter Lamb's market will have the store room adjoining his present quarters and the rooms next to the alley will be built so as to give Dr. J. W. Wilhoit a most modern office with separate rooms for office, consulation, X-ray and laboratory work.

LOST DOG SMART ENOUGH TO HUNT NEWSPAPER

Mrs. Harry P. Sweet has a nine-months-old police pup that knows a thing or two about "getting around" when away from home without master or mistress.

Mrs. Sweet came to the News office one morning last week with a classified advertisement for her lost dog, and an hour or two later the lost pup stuck his head inside the door of our newspaper establishment looking about as much as to say, "if you know anything about me get busy for I'm hungry and thirsty." We phoned Mrs. Sweet who was only a few minutes coming down from her home on Point Loma to make claim to her lost canine.

A joint card party will be held at Ocean Beach Woman's club, on Thursday evening, May 23, at 8 p. m. under the auspices of the Lt. Bert Allen post and auxiliary, V.F.W. Prizes for bridge and 500 and pinochle. Chairman on arrangements are Mrs. John McCaffery and comrade George N. Speer.

ROOSEVELT'S RADIO CHAT IS OPTIMISTIC—VIEWS OF BUSINESS LEADERS.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

©, Western Newspaper Union.

HIGH optimism marked the "fireside chat" which President Roosevelt delivered over the radio to the people of America, which people, he said, are, as a whole, "feeling a lot better—a lot more cheerful than for many, many years." He asserted we are already on the unmistakable march toward recovery, and told how he means to promote the return to normal conditions with his works relief program. He promised to put to work three and a half million persons now on the relief rolls, and to press for enactment of legislation he considers necessary for carrying on the New Deal.

President Roosevelt

Only once did Mr. Roosevelt allude to such critics of his administration as Senator Long, Father Coughlin and Governor Talmadge. He said:

"The overwhelming majority of people in this country know how to sift the wheat from the chaff in what they hear and what they read. They know that the process of the constructive rebuilding of America cannot be done in a day or a year, but that it is being done in spite of a few who seek to confuse them and to profit by their confusion."

These six "fundamental principles," said the President, must guide the work relief program: Projects must be useful, most of the money must go for labor, "a considerable proportion of the costs" must be returned to the treasury, only those projects which can employ persons on relief will be approved, and projects will be approved in a given area in proportion to the unemployed in that area.

Admitting that graft will creep into such vast and speedy spending as his program calls for, the President asked citizens to help him make this "the most efficient and cleanest example of public enterprise the world has ever seen" and thus to give "a smashing answer for those cynical men who say that a democracy cannot be honest and efficient."

LEGISLATION which the President said, in his radio talk, should be enacted by congress immediately included the old age and unemployment insurance bill, the NRA extension bill, the public utility holding company bill, the transportation control bill, and the banking bill.

Here he comes into conflict again with the views of business leaders of the country. The National Association of Manufacturers has just issued its economic analysis of conditions, which says recovery is "within our grasp" and that the nation is closer to breaking the back of the depression than at any time for years, but asks that, in order to stimulate business, the administration and congress temporarily shelve as "disturbing" such legislation as unemployment insurance, the omnibus banking bill, the utility holding company bill, the 30-hour work week, the Wagner labor disputes bill, the Guffey bituminous coal measure and proposed changes in railroad laws.

Of tied-up capital, the analysis said this:

"Surveys indicate that close to $20,000,000,000 in expenditures, which would give employment to 4,000,000 men for two years, is pent up in the field of factory expansion, renovation and rehabilitation alone.

"The release of this flow of private capital by removing political uncertainties would dwarf the billions appropriated by congress for relief and make unnecessary the expenditure of much of the taxpayers' money."

This document was given out as the members of the United States Chamber of Commerce were gathering in Washington for their twenty-third annual convention, and naturally their speakers endorsed it and attacked much of the proposed legislation mentioned as unwarranted intrusion of the government into business.

Henry I. Harriman, who has been president of the organization for three years, retired from that office in favor of Harper Sibley of Rochester, N. Y. The new president is a banker and a farmer on a big scale.

HOW the New Dealers propose to redistribute wealth by double taxation of large estates is revealed by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in a letter to Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the senate finance committee. Mr Morgenthau outlines a plan of imposing inheritance taxes and also retaining the existing estate taxes, asserting this is in line with "our fundamental objectives." That this would result in the dissolution of large properties, the secretary recognizes, for he says:

Secretary Morgenthau

"To prevent the necessity of hasty liquidation of large properties in order to pay the tax, it might be provided that inheritance taxes be payable in a convenient number of installments."

The plan as outlined by Mr. Morgenthau is to impose graduated inheritance taxes on estates, with rates following those of the present income tax rates, which approximate 60 per cent on incomes of a million dollars or more. The present estate taxes have a maximum of 60 per cent over ten million dollars.

Thus there would first be a tax of 60 per cent upon the estate or gift, and then another tax of 60 per cent to be paid by those inheriting or receiving it. This would amount to a combined rate of 85 per cent on an estate of one hundred million dollars.

If all this money were handed out to the poorer people, even Huey Long might be satisfied.

PLANS for spending the $4,880,000,000 work relief fund are being made rapidly, parts of the general scheme being revealed to the public almost every day. The President will be the final arbiter but practically all the federal agencies will participate and three new ones have been announced by Mr. Roosevelt. These will handle rural rehabilitation, rural electrification and grade crossing elimination.

Frank Walker

Standing at the President's right hand is Frank C. Walker, former treasurer of the Democratic party. He has replaced Donald Richberg as chairman of the National Emergency council and is the head of a new division in that body known as the division of application and information. Under his direction all proposals will be sorted out and data on them from various government units will be co-ordinated. Then they will be handed on, with Mr. Walker's recommendations, to a new works allotment board which is headed by Secretary Harold Ickes. These two additions to the alphabet groups in Washington are known as DAI and WAB.

Mr. Roosevelt also announced the appointment of Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins as chief of a works progress division. He will pick workers, fix wages, purchase materials and generally supervise projects.

In a press conference the President named these eight types of work which will be undertaken, with the amount of money to be spent on each:

1. Highways, roads, streets, grade crossing elimination, and express highways, $800,000,000.

2. Rural rehabilitation, relief in stricken agricultural areas, water conservation, water diversion, irrigation, reclamation, rural industrial communities, and subsistence homesteads, $500,000,000.

3. Rural electrification, $100,000,000.

4. Housing, low cost housing in rural and urban areas, reconditioning, and remodeling, $450,000,000.

5. Assistance for educational, professional, and clerical persons and other "white collar" unemployed, $300,000,000.

6. Citizen Conservation corups, $600,000,000.

7. Sanitation, soil erosion, stream pollution, reforestation, flood control, rivers and harbors, $350,000,000.

8. Loans, grants, or both, to cities, counties, states, and other political subdivisions for public works, $900,000,000.

The rural rehabilitation work will be directed by Rexford G. Tugwell, under-secretary of agriculture, and he will not be responsible to Secretary Wallace but will have a free hand to carry out his schemes for moving families from marginal lands, shifting stranded rural communities and building cities outside of large urban centers to relieve slum congestion.

Appointment of Mr. Walker leaves Mr. Richberg free, as the President said, to devote his time to the NRA during the period of pending legislation in congress and litigation in the Supreme court.

HAVING listened to Senator Long of Louisiana and other orators who do not like the administration and its New Deal and also have little love for the G. O. P., the National Farmers' Holiday association, in session at Des Moines, Iowa, decided that a third national political party should be formed.

Milo Reno

Milo Reno, national president of the association, had a lively encounter with a group of alleged Communists during a business session. They sought adoption of a resolution calling for legislation for "relief without debts," "production credit without strings," and immediate repeal of the AAA. Reno denounced them as Wall Street racketeers and henchmen of Soviet Russia.

"You can't talk. You can't argue. Don't try to get the floor. I'm running this meeting," Reno said. "Sit down and shut up. Get out before we get really mad."

REPUBLICANS of nine midwestern states who met at Excelsior Springs, Mo., decided that the "grass roots" conference of leaders of the party should be held in Springfield, Ill., the date to be fixed later, though it probably will be early in June. The purpose of this gathering will be the rejuvenation of the party and the launching of a campaign to restore popular government. The nine states participating, which will name delegates, are Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Wisconsin and Oklahoma.

ORGANIZED labor opened its attempt to obtain recognition in the automobile industry with a strike of workers in the Toledo plant of the Chevrolet Motor company. The factory was closed down immediately, though only a part of the force joined in the strike. Union pickets were placed about it, but city police and deputy sheriffs were on hand to see that there was no disorder.

President Sloan of General Motors corporation issued this statement in New York:

"The vital question involved is whether General Motors corporation is willing to sign an agreement for a closed shop recognizing the local union as the exclusive representative of all the employees of the Toledo plant. This General Motors will not do."

The union, in a lengthy statement, said its committee "has done everything in its power to meet with the management and to secure an amicable and fair adjustment of the matter of wages, hours and union recognition and various other grievances.

"The management refused to sign a contract of any kind and flatly refused every section of the proposed contract with the exception of two minor points."

The company offered to make wage readjustments and give a 5 per cent general wage increase, show no discrimination against union men, and agreed to respect seniority rights as provided by the automobile labor board.

Leo C. Wollman, chairman of the National Automobile Labor board, reported that that body had completed a canvass of 163,150 workers in American automobile plants and found that 68.6 per cent of them showed no affiliation with any labor organization. The various employees' associations grouped together ranked second with 21,774 members, equal to 13.3 per cent of the total. The American Federation of Labor was third with 14,057, or 8.6 per cent, while the Associated Automobile Workers of America were fourth with 6,083, or 3.7 per cent.

GEN. W. W. ATTERBURY, veteran official of the Pennsylvania railroad, has retired as president of the company eight months before that would have been necessary under its regulations, because of ill health. The directors unanimouly elected Martin W. Clement to succeed him. The new president of the great system was born 53 years ago in Sunbury, Pa., and entered the service of the road in 1901 as a rodman. His promotion was steady and nine years ago he became the vice president.

M. W. Clement

General Atterbury had this to say of his successor:

"Since he became vice president, Clement has been intimately associated with me in conducting the company's affairs and in our relations with the other railroads and with the government.

"The remarkable results achieved by the company last year, one of the most difficult periods the railroad has ever experienced, were largely due to Clement's leadership. His manifest capabilities have commended him not only to his associate directors and officers, but also to the executives of other railroads with whom he has been working in recent years in the interest of the railroad industry as a whole.

"Moreover, he enjoys the confidence, respect and co-operation of the entire Pennsylvania railroad organization."

GERMANY'S latest breach of the treaty of Versailles, the building of submarines, is stirring up a lot of angry talk in Great Britain, France and Italy. The English are especially disturbed, for they remember only too vividly how near the Germans came to starving them during the war by the destruction of shipping by the undersea boats. Anglo-German conversations on naval restriction were to have been held in London the second week in May, and these may now be called off or at least postponed.

The French are less vexed because they think the development may force a showdown on the whole status of the German navy and Hitler's demand for at least 35 per cent of the British tonnage and approximate parity with that of France. Naval experts in Paris said the disclosure might "well prove of inestimable benefit for military France in awakening naval Britain to the dangers of Hitler's armaments policy."

Information obtained by the powers was that Germany already had under construction a number of 250-ton submarines and planned a large fleet of them. Spokesmen for the German government denied that any were being built yet, but at the same time admitted that submarines were being "considered" in connection with plans for rebuilding the navy.

The League of Nations council appointed a committee to study what action should be taken if Germany violated the peace treaty again, so observers are interestedly waiting to see if the matter will be taken up at the council meeting on May 20.

AMBASSADORS of the United States, Chile, Peru, and Argentina delivered to the Brazilian government a collective note asking Brazil to participate in efforts to end the Paraguay-Bolivia war in the Chaco by mediation. Brazil rejected such an invitation some time ago because she had been unintentionally excluded from a projected Chaco economic conference.

The two warring nations were engaged in a long and very bloody battle, the outcome of which was still undecided.

Let Our Motto Be GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

MORE ABOUT INFANTILE PARALYSIS

The first cases of infantile paralysis were described 48 years ago in Stockholm, Sweden. Seven years later the first cases were observed in this country in the state of Vermont. In 1907 and in 1916 there were several thousand cases in New York city. Since that time infantile paralysis has occurred in almost all communities in the United States. Each year a few isolated cases occur in various communities. Every four or five years epidemic waves or several cases occur in every community. The disease is well known to the public not because it is so fatal but because those who survive are so frequently deformed and paralyzed. During 1931 there were 101 deaths from infantile paralysis in the state of Illinois. During the same year there were 380 deaths from diphtheria, 333 from measles and 255 from cerebro-spinal meningitis; 361 from scarlet fever and 225 from whooping cough. These figures are given to illustrate that infantile paralysis is not a major killing disease. 1931 was an epidemic year for infantile paralysis in Illinois in that we had 741 cases reported. 1917, 1921 and 1927 were also epidemic years. This shows the wave-like appearance of centers of infection.

Infantile paralysis is caused by an ultra-microscopic virus, or, in other words, the causative agent is too small to be seen with a microscope. Prevalence of the disease usually begins to increase noticeably in June, reaches its peak in early September, and declines rapidly wtih the onset of cold weather. It is a summer and early fall disease, and it is a disease of the north temperate zones of the world. In the tropical and subtropical regions where it is warm most of the year, there are very few cases of infantile paralysis. The reason for this is unknown.

The disease is transmitted from person to person by direct contact—the transfer of secretions from the nose and throat by coughing, spitting or by the hands, or it may be by food or other objects which are handled by several people in rapid succession.

It is now thought that infection with the causative agent of infantile paralysis is widespread, but that only a few of the infected persons develop paralysis. The paralysis is due to invasion of the nervous system by the virus. This causes destruction of nerve tissue and leads to paralysis of the muscles supplied by these nerves. Thus infantile paralysis is a difficult disease to control and it is extremely difficult to determine who is spreading the contagion. Some authorities think that the August and September colds and digestive disturbances of children are due to mild attacks of infantile paralysis. If this is true, these cases do not have an infection of their nervous system and hence do not have paralysis. But, nevertheless, these mild cases spread the contagion.

Infantile paralysis is essentially a disease of childhood, as its name implies. Sixty-five per cent of all cases of infantile paralysis occur under five years of age, and 95 per cent under ten years. Most of the remaining 5 per cent occur between the ages of ten and twenty, but any age can be affected. The fatality rate is lowest for children between one and five years of age; it tends to increase proportionately as age advances.

The peculiar individual susceptibility of the child seems to be the determining factor in infantile paralysis. It is seldom that two children in the same family have this disease. When several cases do occur in a family, they usually come down together or within a short time of each other, indicating a common source of infection. It is estimated that more than half the grown-up people of the country are immune or resistant to infantile paralysis. So far as we know now this can only have been brought about by having had experience with the virus causing this disease. Hence, most of us then have fought a battle with the army of invaders causing infantile paralysis, and we have won the fight.

We still know hardly anything about this baffling disease, but there is one bright spot in the picture—convalescent serum.

A person recovering from infantile paralysis has antitoxin in his blood. When this blood is injected into a child before the paralytic stage of the disease develops, it shortens the duration of the disease and oftentimes prevents extensive paralysis. Some authorities question the value of this convalescent serum, but the experience of the Illinois state department of public health leads us to think that the serum is beneficial.

Three factors are of greatest importance in controlling infantile paralysis. First, early diagnosis must be made if the case is to be benefited by serum treatment. Second, the serum must be injected before the beginning of paralysis in order to prevent paralysis. Third, if early paralysis has developed, then extensive deformity can be prevented if treatment is carried out under the direction of an orthopedic surgeon.

Ancient Sumerian Statues Shown in Chicago

THESE Sumerian statues, 5,000 years old, exhibiting considerable artistic competence, have been placed in the museum of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. They are part of a hoard of sacred images without parallel among known Babylonian works of art, and were discovered by the Iraq expedition of the Oriental Institute, under the field directorship of Prof. Henri Frankfort at Tell Asmar and Khafaje, within 25 miles of Bagdad, Iraq. Renovation of the shrine of the god of Abu, Lord of Fertility, at Tell Asmar, sometime between 3000 and 2800 B. C., saved a large number of the statues. Because they had been consecrated they could not be thrown away or sold, and so they were buried under the floor of the shrine, to remain until the institute expedition uncovered them.

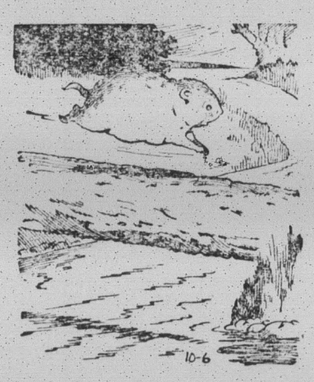
Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

DANNY CROSSES THE LAUGHING BROOK

Look long enough and hard enough,
You'll always find a way
To reach the place or get the thing
You're hoping that you may.

DANNY MEADOW MOUSE peeped out from under the tangle of matted grass back toward the Smiling Pool. Plunger the Osprey was rising higher and higher in the air and there was nothing in his great claws. It was clear that he had failed to catch the Big Pickerel.



Then He Scampered Across and Gave a Tiny Sigh of Thankfulness.

"I'm glad of it," muttered Danny, which, when you think of it, was rather funny, for the Big Pickerel had been watching for Danny himself and would have liked nothing better than to have snapped his big jaws on him. But Danny knew so well what it felt like to be hunted that though he was rather glad that the Big Pickerel had been given a fright, he was also glad that he had escaped.

Of Billy Mink, Snapper the Turtle and the Big Pickerel he could see nothing at all and rightly guessed that all were in hiding. Reddy Fox was sitting on the opposite bank, looking up at Plunger and grinning in the most provoking way.

"They've forgotten about poor little me," thought Danny and his heart stopped pit-a-patting quite so fast. "The thing for me to do is to keep going while the going is good. I've got to get across to the other side but I don't dare swim across the Smiling Pool. The Laughing Brook comes in right here and if I keep on following along the bank perhaps I will find a place where I can cross it without having to swim. It isn't the water but the things in the water I fear." Danny shuddered as he thought of the Big Pickerel.

As soon as he had quite recovered his breath he started on, darting from one hiding place to another, here a bunch of grass, there a big mullein leaf, yonder a piece of bark, and again a pile of sticks. He never stopped out in the open. No indeed. That would have been the very worst kind of Meadow Mouse folly!

Now the water in the Laughing Brook ran swiftly in places, leaped in merry little falls, or seemingly rested in quiet pools, but for a long, long way it offered no crossing place for a tired little Meadow Mouse who was afraid to swim because of hungry fish who might be watching. Though he rested often, Danny grew more and more tired.

All afternoon he traveled and he was getting just a little discouraged and almost a little hopeless when just as the Black Shadows came creeping silently through the Green Forest he came to a bridge. It was only an old log which had fallen across the Laughing Brook, but for Danny it was a real bridge. He looked this way, that way and the other way. He listened with both ears. Then he scampered across and gave a tiny sigh of thankfulness. He was on the home side at last.

Do YOU Know—

That until the invention of matches, fire-making in the American colonies was quite a laborious task. The Indian produced fire by twirling a stick held firmly against a piece of wood. To give the stick a rapid motion he wrapped a bow-string about it and then drew the bow swiftly to and fro. The white settlers' method was the striking together of flint and steel.

QUESTION BOX
By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I visited a night club, in New York, and the thing that puzzled me was how can they tell the guests from the waiters, as they both wear evening clothes?

Truly yours,
HERR TONNICK.

Answer: That is very simple. The waiters stay sober.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I've been invited to go swimming in a body of water where I heard there were a lot of sharks. Rather than be called a coward I have decided to accept the invitation. Can you tell me what to do if a shark grabs me by the leg?

Yours truly,
IKE N. FLOAT.

Answer: By all means let him have it. Never argue with a shark.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
Please explain what is meant by "The Minimum Wage"?

Truly yours,
CAL. S. THENNICKS.

Answer: The minimum wage is the money you get for "going" to work. If you want more money, why then of course, you have to work after you get to where you are "going."

Dear Mr. Wynn:
While walking along the railroad tracks I happened to look to one side and there I saw three men sleeping on piles of coal, which had been taken from freight cars the day before. What do you make out of that?

Yours truly,
N. GINEER.

Answer: They were probably laying in their winter's coal.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

VARIOUS GOOD THINGS

A SALAD may be made from so many different food combinations that one need never be at a loss for one. An apple, a few dates, a slice of mild onion, will make a most tasty combination. A slice of tomato, topped with chopped onion and celery, or chopped cucumber and onion, a bit of chopped green pepper and any dressing at hand will make another.

Arrange alternate slices of orange and tomato on lettuce. Sprinkle with finely chopped celery and serve with french dressing.

Coffee Souffle.

Scald one cupful of milk with one tablespoonful of coffee and strain. Add four and one-half tablespoonfuls of tapioca, a dash of salt, and cook until the tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Now add one-third of a cupful of sugar, cool, add three beaten egg yolks and fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Pour into a greased baking dish and bake in hot water in a moderate oven for one hour. Serve with:

Custard Sauce.

Combine one and one-half cupfuls of milk, three egg yolks beaten slightly, one-third of a cupful of sugar, one-eighth teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of vanilla, added after the above mixture has cooked in a double boiler until the mixture coats the spoon. Chill, fold in one-fourth of a cupful of cream just before serving.

Crab Mornay.

Pour three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice over one-half pound of crab meat. Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, add the crab meat, one teaspoonful of salt; two chopped red peppers and a dash of white pepper. Cook for 20 minutes.

Honeymoon Divinity.

Boil one cupful of honey, two cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of orange juice until it forms a soft ball in cold water, or when it reaches 240 F. on the candy thermometer. Remove from the fire and pour over two stiffly beaten egg whites. Beat until thick, add two cupfuls of chopped raisins and 20 marshmallows shredded Cut into squares before it hardens.

We're Going to the Circus!

By ANNE CAMPBELL

WERE going to the circus!
We'll sit in the front row.
We'll take in the concessions,
And see the Wild West show.
It's to oblige the children!
That's what we always say,
But grown-ups are all happy
When it is Circus day!

I thought I loved the circus,
When, as a small town girl,
I watched the glittering parade,
The gilded, motley whirl;
But circuses afforded
Only a little joy
Compared with this enchantment,
Shared with my girl and boy.

We're going to the circus!
We'll take the neighborhood.
There's Pat and Phil and Barry,
And Dick, if he is good.
And as I buy them peanuts,
And share their childish zest,
I'll know that youth is lovely,
But growing old is best!

Liquid powder must be applied properly if it is to give that smooth, well-powdered look. Use a small sponge—not your fingers—and put it on smoothly and evenly, never letting it accumulate in driblets or become spotty and thin on your neck. It's a grand foundation for your evening make-up.

This charming street dress of blue wool has an unusual color combination destined to be popular this season. The leather belt is of darker blue and the blouse peeking out is of red silk. The blue Milan straw hat is to match.

HELP FOR THE BLIND

For an invention that enables a blind person to read any book or paper, the John Price Wetherill medal will be awarded on May 15 to Robert E. Naumburg, of New York, by the Franklin institute, Philadelphia. Mr. Naumburg's invention, known as the Visagraph, "reads" printed words for the blind with the aid of a photo-electric cell, and embosses each letter, several times enlarged, upon a strip of paper which passes under the finger-tips of the operator. The machine first was tried at Perkins Institution for the Blind, Watertown, Mass., and is regularly used there. Its advantage is that any printed material may be read, and the reader need not know Braille, or any other system for the blind. The characters reproduced by the machine simply are magnified reproductions of the printed letters.—Literary Digest.

MOTHER WAS HONORED

Kipling's wonderful masterpiece, "Mother O'Mine," in an outpouring of rare sentiment combining mind and soul. Whistler's celebrated work of art, "Mother," also lives today. These two men—a poet and an artist, have stirred the world with pen and brush with immortal praise. Two men have rose to national greatness; Kipling, whose sacred memory of his own mother, inspired him to simple words that have gripped the human soul ever since. Whistler produced his masterpiece from the actual living pose of his mother. A sick mother was resolved to help her striving son. When ill she posed, but she did more than pose. Her new-old letter tells how, painracked, she never ceased for a moment to pray for and believe in the success of her boy.

Last Sunday was Mother's Day and Uncle Sam added his appreciation of Mother by issuing 200,000,000 three-cent stamps last year in commemoration of the American mother, using Whistler's famous painting. The day becomes more significant every year. Children believe in Mother's Day, in fact every day to them is mother's day, for "what is home without a mother?" She is the best friend in the household; she sews, cooks and sweeps; girds, guides and guards the child, or the whole family, for that matter. She can fill two places at the same time; listen to every murmur and knows every human want. As a mind reader there is none better; she is the last one to bed at night and the first one to report in the morning. No home is complete without a mother; Behold, "she is the salt of the earth."

There is a mild rush of emigrants to Alaska by the middle-west farmers seeking homes. It must be a great inducement for there are over a hunderd families from one state aone. This is the drawing card. The Federal government offers to loan each family of four, $3,000 reimbursement expenses, to be paid back in 30 years at three per cent interst. There are many interesting features of Alaska from the historical side. As a territory it contains 600,000 square miles, and the nearest point is 700 miles from the United States. Uncle Sam invested $7,200,000 for this domain, back in 1887, bought from Russia. Gold was discovered in 1880, but the Klondike gold rush was in 1896. It has plenty of gold and to date over 400 millions have been mined. The country is slowly settling and to date it has over 65,000 population, with over 5,000 inhabitants at the capitol, Juneau. The Yukon river is over 1725 miles long, 1,200 miles already navigable. This resolute band of pioneers are sure to write new stanzas into humanity's saga of the soil.

California enjoys a coveted reputation for producing great abundance of nursery stock—fruit trees especially. Five nurseries in Placer county alone, sold over 1,000,000 deciduous trees this spring and received orders from Mexico, England, France, Germany and India. This is only from one county. The state has a reputation of being one of the best in the Union for its production of diversified fruits, such as semi-tropical, citrus and deciduous fruits. Climate conditions in California are unexcelled; this is the reason so much fruit is harvested here. The ocean with its pure, fresh air fanning over the warm sunny fields and orchards is nature's best medicine for health and growth. Already our world-fame makes a demand for California products, either fresh fruits and vegetables or prepared in cans ready for table use.

Cities and towns are apt to find it a most busy time right now, burning off vacant lots and cleaning up private premises in general. It is usually a put-off job mostly by the property owner, who has good intentions but lacks the vigor of getting at it. Many a lot becomes a fire-trap and a hazard with tall grass and weeds which need watching about now. Here's what John Burroughs wrote about weeds, in his essay entitled, "A Bunch of Herbs:" Weeds are great travelers; they are, indeed, the tramps of the vegetable world. They are going east, west, north, south; they walk, they fly, they swim, they steal a ride; they travel by rail, by flood, by wind; they go underground and the go above, across lots, and by highways."

The League of Nations will meet with membership enmasse on Monday, May 20th to reconsider the Chaco war situation. The League can guess one basic reason why the Chaco fighters are reluctant to listen to its peace orders—The peace-preaching League nations are mostly building up bigger fighting machines of their own. With 19 American nations declaring they will not recognize territorial acquisition by either belligerent, and with Bolivia acceding to League demands, Paraguay still defies the League and fights on. Geneva' plan, with hostilities halted, would let the World court decide the dispute, but it makes a bad looking picture when peace-preaching nations keep on increasing their fighting strength.

There is sure to be future prosperity found in the Golden West. No depression can halt entirely the opportunity open to sturdy, honest-meaning citizens who come here with that purpose in view. California has its health and it represents a place of greater opportunity, where brain and brawn have their reward and where the rigors of weather are modified to such an extent that life becomes less of a struggle for mere survival than anywhere else. California stands alone as the one expedient of the times; as Caesar said: "There is a tide in the affairs of men, which taken at the flood, leads on to fortune". After the depression, this will be the land of promise with a richer fruitage than ever in the past.

Just about one hundred years ago steel pens were invented. Joseph Gillot was the inventor. Prior to this time we had nothing but goose quills with which to record our thoughts. The advent of the steel pen meant the passing of the old goose as an important factor in authorship—with certain obvious exceptions. We get our name for the pen-knife as the instrument for making quill pens, and also putting points on the quill.

DUSEK-CHRISTY MATCH ORDERED BY COMMISSION

Dr. Martin of the State Athletic commission has ordered Ernie Dusek back into a match next Tuesday night with Vic Christy. Martin also assigns Don McDonald as the referee and has instructed both Dusek and McDonald that should there be any violation of rules that both will be suspended indefinitely. Christy made protest when he lost the last match to Dusek, claiming that fans held him from re-entering the ring after Dusek had tossed him into the seats. At clean wrestling few are Christy's peers but never has such an unethical mat man appeared here as this fellow Dusek.

Matchmaker Platner has also taken a hand and requested Dusek to post a cash bond to refrain from eye gouging.

An all star program, featuring many of the great wrestlers now entered in the International Tournament will complete the program.

Wallace Bill Dies In Senate Committee

Admitting that his bill to create a local commission to control the Mission Bay recreation area is virtually dead, Assemblyman Ralph Wallace asked the Council in a letter Monday to blame Senator Ed Fletcher if anything goes wrong with the promises made by the State Park Commission.

Wallace said that until he introduced the bill, which passed the Assembly, the State Park Commission had done nothing for any of the parks in this county.

"Now the Park Commission, fearful the bill would pass, has promised $2,149,500 for Mission Bay Park development and an additional $1,855,500 for Silver Strand, Carlsbad, Borego and other state parks.

"Senator Fletcher has accepted their promises. I want you to hold him personally responsible for the board's action and I want you to check up once a month on the four million-dollar development work we have been promised in return for the slaughter of that fine little masterpiece known as the Wallace Mission Bay development bill."

PROF. STEINMETZ FORUM TALK WELL RECEIVED

Tuesday's evening's Town Forum talk at Ocean Beach school auditorium was well received by a fair sized audience. Prof. Harry C. Steinmetz of State College presented his ideas as to what advantage it would be if our generally used utilities were under public ownership.

The speaker presented some enlightening figures and a reasonable argument in favor of public ownership which question he has studied for several years past.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

La Fayette Plummer, original and brilliant young lecturer on "The Symbology of Mathematics" at Theosophical university, will be the speaker at Theosophical headquarters, Point Loma, next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. His subject will be "Spiritual vs. Psychic Powers." The public is invited.

Plummer will be assisted in answering questions by Miss Grace Knoche, instructor in Sanskrit at the university. Both speakers were born at Point Loma and have received all their education at the Theosophical institute.

Says Plummer: "Most occult study today centers around psychic phenomena. In our fascination for psychism, we fail to see that there are spiritual powers in man which are as far above the psychic in quality and scope, as is the sun contrasted with the moon. The moon shines on our earth alone, the sun shines on all the planets. Our psychic powers are restricted to our limited personalities; but our spiritual powers carry us in thought and consciousness to the highest portions of our beings and thence to the limits of the solar system. But great as is man's spiritual self, there is the divine within him. There is no limit to the reaches of his divine power, for once a man is united with his divinity, he is no longer man, he is a cosmic being, a god."

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

The proverb, "In the way of righteousness is life; and in the pathway thereof there is no death," is the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on "Mortals and Immortals" on Sunday in all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

Among the Bible selections in the Lesson-Sermon are these verses from the Gospel of John: "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free. . . . If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed. . . . Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death."

Correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, state: "Man in the likeness of God as revealed in Science cannot help being immortal. . . . In Science, man's immortality depends upon that of God, good, and follows as a necessary consequence of the immortality of good."

SALES TAX FOR FIRST QUARTER IS $13,400,000

Sales taxes for the first three months of this year paid to the State Treasury by California retailers have reached a total of $13,400,000. This is $1,890,000 more than the corresponding figure for the first quarter of 1934, according to the State Board of Equalization, in whose office the sales tax is administered.

Deferred payments are expected to bring the total collections for the last quarter up to approximately $14,000,000 as contrasted with the final figure of $12,286,480 for the same period a year ago. This marks an increase of practically fifteen per cent in the yield from the tax.

"Coming!" he shouted thickly and seized a hammer and attacked the trunk lock. Ammunition must be in there.

The crowd milled, now, trampling the new snow, completely out of hand at this delay. Two or three aided Tim in his plea for at least temporary moderation but others rebelled and fought to get the post which would batter down the stair door. These weaved to and fro there in the packed throng, a quarrel within a quarrel.

And then came a hush, a quick, spreading hush which swept the crowd like a shadow; like a swiftly speeding shadow, wiping out sound as a shadow wipes out sunlight, breaking sentences in half. And then rose a quick popping of excited voices.

"Elliott!" "Here he is!" "Look!" "He's hurt!"

Bundled to the ears in a great over coat, cap drawn low, supported on the one side by John Martin and on the other by Able Armitage, he came slowly, painfully out of the side street. He scarcely seemed to be aware of that throng; did not look either to the right or the left. All his energy was bent on moving forward.

He gained the middle of the street in an impressive hush. Then he murmured a word to Able and they halted.

He looked about at his men and smiled a trifle weakly, but in his look was a quality which clearly indicated that love which strong men have for their kind.

"It's all right, boys," he said and only those in the first ranks could hear, his voice was that light. "They didn't get me . . . badly. I appreciate this . . . but want you to . . . get back to . . . camp."

He panted for breath and lifted his face to the broken windows above. Far back in that room he caught a glimpse of a face watching him—cocked as though striving to hear.

"It's my fight," he went on. "Not yours. . . . I don't want any . . . of you hurt. Go back. . . . Will you go . . . back?"

The crowd stirred.

"You bet we will, Ben!" a man called. "Now that you're located if you ask it, we will!"

Tim Jeffers worked his way to Ben's side and put a hand on his shoulder, listening to what Able told him.

"Go home, boys!" Tim Jeffers called. "They knifed Ben last night but he's well took care of. You teamsters get out your horses; we've found what we come for. To camp, every last Hoot Owl hand!"

Men relaxed. The post that was to have battered in Brandon's door was dropped. The mob was satisfied.

Slowly Ben Elliott made his way back to Dawn's home.

As Tim Jeffers took his place beside the sick man, Able Armitage drew into the post office entry to watch the mob disperse. Emory Sweet was standing there.

"The king is dead!" Able muttered solemnly, staring at those broken windows.

"Long live the king!" said Emory.

Pause.

"Dead men tell no tales."

"No, but sometimes a corpse will kick back!"

CHAPTER XIII

Furiously, Nicholas Brandon saw as the days passed the wreckage of his power pile up on a flood of public resentment, of loosened expressions of distrust and contempt and hatred which had grown and festered unobserved for years.

The man who had replaced the glass in his office windows that Sunday afternoon worked slowly and silently where, in other days, he had done odd jobs with swift efforts so that his labor might give his employer satisfaction, and had taken every opportunity to make talk with the town's great man.

On Monday as Brandon walked along the street he saw faces leering at him from windows, and men he passed averted their glances in a gleeful sort of embarrassment, or looked at him with surly, defiant glares.

In yard and mill he was conscious that his employees were thinking only of his fall. He discharged one man for loafing and the fellow only laughed at him. . . . Laughed!

"There's plenty room at Hoot Owl for good hands," he said and laughed again.

That mob yesterday had not wrecked the town as they had threatened but the ruin they left was of far more consequence. Their coming had stripped Brandon of everything but his material possessions and now these only mocked him in survival.

Back in the office he paced the place like a caged animal.

Mail arrived. He took the packet of letters and drank deeply from his bottle again.

He thumbed the letters absently, until the script on one caught his eye. The envelope contained a single sheet of notepaper and he unfolded it with trembling fingers. On the sheet was written:

"I never want to see you again. I know now what the whole country has known and been afraid to admit for years. I have thought you were my friend but now I know you are my worst enemy, as you are the sworn enemy of those I love most.

"DAWN."

He stood for a time staring at the paragraph; then read it again and drained his whisky bottle. Such a note, now, was to have been expected by an ordered mind, of course, but his fevered brain had not foreseen any necessity for abandoning this, the most precious of his hopes. He trembled a bit and made a strange sound in his throat.

A meticulous office man was Nicholas Brandon, and though he had suffered the severest blow of his experience just now he mechanically went about his habitual procedure. He had received and read a letter. It required no reply. The next step in orderly procedure was to file it.

In the outer office were ranks and rows of letter files. But this letter did not belong there.

In the great safe to which only he had combination and keys reposed two files side by side. He took both out and placed them on the desk. He opened one and a cruel smile twitched his lips. It contained letters on paper of varying size, color and quality. He riffled through these, stopping now and again to read a phrase; a sentence, a paragraph. . . . Pleas, these were; a writing begging for help . . . and he smiled again.

In the other file were more letters, some yellowed by age and these older ones had been written in the unformed script of a child. . . . "Dear Uncle Nick," they all began. Always that, though the handwriting grew formed and mature until it was identical with that on the single sheet he had just read. These were Dawn McManus' letters to him, saved since her childhood.

He ran through them almost idly, his senses dulled by whisky and the calamity which had befallen him. A narrow slip of tablet paper fell out. He looked at the penciled note on one side.

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

Happier memories, that brought, of the time Dawn had brought girls home with her from school for Thanksgiving and had taken them to the hunting camp for a week-end.

Brandon had gone with the party and it was there that he had first remarked Dawn's emerging womanhood, that the desire for her had been kindled in his blood; there in the camp where her father, as the whole country knew, had been with Sam Faxon on the night when Faxon fled to his death. But Dawn had never known that. She had laughed and been happy at Antler lodge.

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

He read it again. It bore no date it was unsoiled; it betrayed no indication of the time that had passed since its inscription. The note had been left on his desk for him three years before. . . . He leaned forward sharply and his eyes narrowed. . . . After a moment he straightened and smiled oddly. A look like relief, almost like happiness spread over his face.

* * * * * * * *

Fine strength of body healed Ben Elliott's wound rapidly. By mid-week he was dressed and sitting before the fire with Dawn, talking of his return to Hoot Owl on the morrow.

"It's been so good, even under the circumstances, to spend time with you," he said gravely.

The girl flushed but made no reply.

"And all the time I've been wondering, Dawn, why you wouldn't let me come. . . . You've been so kind, so generous, so . . . so friendly. And yet, only a few days ago, you told me I must never come again. Why was it, Dawn? Why, when I love you so?"

"Don't!" she begged in a light whisper. "Please!"

"But it's beyond any power I have to keep still. I love you, Dawn, better than life. Can you believe that, when I've seen so little of you? Look at me?"—fiercely. "Don't you like it, Dawn, being loved?"

"Ah . . . Like it? It's wonderful, Ben. . . . It's too wonderful!" She averted her face.

"And loved by me?"

"Yes, yes! It's all wonderful. It's too wonderful, Ben. Things like it just can't be!"

"Why not? It's wonderful, you say, and yet . . . Can't you explain?"

She was fighting for self-control, now, and wrested her hands from his, backing away, white and shaken.

"You can't understand, perhaps. Sometimes I can't understand myself. Always I've wanted to be loved by . . . by you, Ben Elliott! It's given me the only true happiness I've ever had.

"And then I had to remember what I am. Can't you see that a girl who is known as the daughter of a murderer can't let any man love her?"

"That's foolish! . . . It's terrible, I know, for you to bear. But let me help, dear girl; let me stand by your side and help!"

"No, no! I can't bear it! I couldn't take a cloud to you and to your children. . . . And it's all a mistake, all a lie! My father was no killer!" Her voice rose in sharp conviction on that. "He was kind and gentle; he never would hurt another. All these years I've know it and others know it, but just being sure in our own minds isn't enough. The whole world must know! Something tells me my father is alive somewhere, waiting, watching, suffering. . . . But until we can prove that or something else comes up to banish this cloud . . . No, don't kiss me again! I can't stand it, I tell you! I can't stand it, Ben!"

Sobbing, she fled the room.

"Well, that ought not to be impossible!" Elliott said to himself after a long, thoughtful interval. "Nothing much is. . . ."

He made no further moves toward love making after that but far into the night he talked with Dawn of her father. She had not heard all of the story, he realized. She did not know, for instance, that the tragedy which preceded McManus' disappearance took place in Antler lodge; she did not know how far her father had gone in his attempts to drown sorrow of his wife's death by drinking. But she did know that Faxon was dead, that her father was blamed and that a dusty warrant for his arrest on a charge of homicide still reposed in the county records.

Next day he declared that he felt fit to drive back to camp and for an hour argued with Dawn, trying to win her promise that he might come again, but she begged him to stay away for a time, at least.

Elliott did not go at once to the stable where his team awaited him. He entered the court house and went over the meager records of the case, but little that was new rewarded his search. The net yield of that search was only to impress him with the proportions of the new task he had set for himself and as he drove out of town his heart was heavier than it had been in years.

Putting the Hoot Owl on its feet had been a lark; shearing Brandon of his power had been hazardous but, after all, simple. . . . But this other was something else again.

That night Bird-Eye Blaine sat with Elliott for long and went over the circumstances leading up to Faxson's death. Men in Tincup commenced to whisper that Elliott was delving into the McManus case and the gossip reached Brandon who was locked in his office much of the time, now, soaked with whisky. He did not drink for many hours after the news reached him. He kept his head clear and planned.

CHAPTER XIV

Able told Dawn of Ben's activity, watching her face narrowly because he understood the obstacle that was between these two. He saw hope come, followed by misgiving and trouble.

It was on Friday that Dawn left Tincup, striking across country far from the road toward Hoot Owl.

She was going to see Ben Elliott and tell him that she must see him now, that her heart could have no peace without him; that he must come to her and let her stand beside him while he pried into the past and attempted to make it give up truth.

At noon, on the edge of a swamp, she sought shelter from the fitful wind, built a small fire and ate the lunch she carried. Then she went on, sighting her mill far away from the top of the next ridge.

Martin was alone in the office when she entered and started up so sharply at sight of her that the girl, in turn was startled.

"I'm sorry!" she exclaimed at bit mystified. "Did I frighten you?"

"No. Not frightened. . . . My thoughts were . . . far from here."

"Is Ben about?"

"Haven't seen him since dinner. Don't know where he went."

Tim Jeffers, just down from camp entered then.

"Where's Ben at?" he asked Martin.

"I don't know. Miss McManus, here, was just asking."

Martin moved to the old table Ben used for a desk.

"Sometimes he leaves a note for me when he's going away." He bent over the table, looking at the litter of papers on it. "No, he left no word. . . . Hum. . . . What's this?"

He picked up a slip of paper, read the single line inscribed on it and looked at Dawn.

"I didn't mean to pry. . . . Probably he's gone to meet you, though. This is a note from you."

"A note! Why, I . . ." Frowning, she took the paper and read:

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

"Why!" she cried. "I didn't . . . But I must have!"—looking from one to the other. "That's my writing."

"Oh!" She let the paper flutter to the floor.

"I wrote that! I wrote that years ago!" she cried, struggling to speak distinctly. "I wrote that note for Mr. Brandon. . . . Years ago. . . . How did it get here? Who is calling Ben to the lodge?"

"What's this?" Tim Jeffers asked roughly. "Brandon? . . . Callin' Ben off alone?"

"Don't you see?" Martin cried and his voice was thick. "Dawn wrote it, all right. But he's sent it to Ben. . . . It's a decoy! Tim, the lad's on his way to the lodge alone and Brandon's planned it!"

No need for more words, then! On went Martin's jacket. From a corner he snatched snowshoes and a pair for Tim.

"We'll go," he said to Dawn. "You tell Buller—"

"But I'm going, too!" the girl cried sharply. "I'm going. Oh, hurry, Tim! We may be too late, now!"

They crossed the railroad tracks at a run put on their snowshoes and with Jeffers breaking trail, entered the timber. Another had gone that way today, a man whose heart burned and sang. Dawn had sent for him; Dawn wanted him!

Entering the office while Martin was in the mill his eyes had encountered Dawn's note. No thought of how it came to be there presented itself. The quick conclusion at which he arrived was that Dawn and others had gone to Antler Lodge; that was where the shot had been fired which sent Sam Faxson to his death. Perhaps Able had taken Dawn there. Hastily, he took his snowshoes and departed.

The distance was a good five miles, however, and part of the going was in soft footing. So it was nearly two hours after his start that he came in sight of the building on the high bank of the Mad Woman.

As he went down the slope he saw snowshoe tracks outside the place.

"Hello!" he cried, mounting a drift and stopping. "Hello, in there!"

No answer. He twisted his feet hastily out of their straps, wondering a bit. For once his alertness was gone, for once he was wholly off guard.

"Dawn!" he called again as he shoved open the door. "Hello, who's here—"

He had crossed the threshold, peering into the gloom, a sudden and cold misgiving sweeping him. "Turn back; withdraw!" a small voice warned but before he could gather himself a blow struck him and he went down under a heavy, living weight.

But as Elliott went down, with his assailant on top, he drew his knees upward, bowed his back and with a trick of rough-and-tumble fighting used the very impact which had floored him to toss the man on beyond.

He heard him curse, saw the other turn as he pitched across the floor and scramble to his feet.

"Brandon!" he cried hoarsely as a savage joy swept him.

At last he was face to face with the man who had struck so many times from the darkness and from behind!

Brandon did not speak. He rushed with head lowered. Great arms wrapped Ben's body, a head drove into the pit of his stomach, driving the breath from his body.

Use of Helium Gas

Air with helium gas content is not poisonous to the body, says Pathfinder Magazine. One of its important uses is to reduce the nitrogen content (about four-fifths of all air) in artificial atmospheres for use in deep sea diving and other work conducted under heavy atmospheric pressure. Experiments conducted by the bureau of mines show that such an atmosphere enables workers to labor for longer periods under higher pressures in safety and comfor, than in an ordinary atmosphere.

Carving of Human Bones

Only some fundamental instinct can account for parallel customs among primitive peoples who never met or even heard of one another's existence. For example, one of the most common practices of prehistoric man was the carving of human bones. These carvings have been found in ancient graves in almost every part of the world.—Collier's Weekly.

TREMENDOUS TRIFLES

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A SHOT SPOILS A PLOT

IT WAS only a little "four-pounder" and the small cannon balls which it fired at the British sloop "Vulture," as she lay at anchor below West Point couldn't possibly have injured her even if they had hit her. But those same cannon balls were destined to expose the treason plot of Benedict Arnold, to send Maj. John Andre to his death and to save the United States the three years' work and the three million dollars it had spent on the fortress at West Point, not to mention their saving the Patriots' cause from coming to a sudden and untimely end.

The "Vulture" had come up the Hudson, bringing Major Andre, adjutant-general of the British army to establish contact with Arnold, and to perfect the plans for his handing over West Point to the enemy. Andre was put ashore to meet Arnold at the home ture" dropped anchor to await his return.

A certain Colonel Livingston regarded the presence of the enemy ship as something of an insult. He asked Col. John Lamb to lend him a gun and some powder. Lamb wrote to him "Firing at a ship with a four pounder is in my opinion, a waste of powder; as the damage she will sustain, is not equal to the expense."

But Livingston persisted until he got the gun. Then he opened fire on the "Vulture" and his bombardment was so annoying that the "Vulture" shifted her moorings and dropped farther down the river.

When Andre was ready to return, the oarsmen hired to row him out to the British ship were too lazy to go the extra distance. So the only thing to do was to send him south by land. Smith provided plain clothes and a horse, guided him for a short distance, then sent him on his way. But Andre got lost, blundered into the hands of three American militiamen who turned him over to a Continental officer. The result is history—the betrayal of Arnold's treason plot and the saving of West Point.

FACE ON THE COIN

KING LOUIS XVI of France lost his head twice. The first time was over a very trifling annoyance but it led to the second time when he lost it over the block of the guillotine. And that was permanent!

When it became certain that nothing could stop the French Revolution the king decided to escape from the Tuileries with his family. On the night of June 21, 1791, a big coach trundled away from the palace with the members of the royal family inside.

At the little town of Ste. Menehould, it was necessary to change the horses. Beyond Menehould was a regiment of royal troops ready to escort the king across the frontier. The journey was almost over.

But the grooms at the post-house were slow and the king, tired from the strain of the long ride, was irritable. For just one moment his majesty raised the curtain of the coach window. He wanted to see how much longer the clumsy grooms would delay his departure.

Among the bystanders idly watching the torchlit scene was Drouet, the village postmaster. He saw the face in the window. But no! It was impossible. It could not be the king of France. Drouet reached into his pocket and took out a coin that had just been minted. The face on the coin was the face he had seen in the coach.

As the equipage turned off the main road and lumbered north through the Argonne forest Drouet pursued it. Reaching Varennes, he roused the agent of the Commune. The arrest of the royal fugitives followed an hour later. Soon the king was on his way back to Paris with his queen, Marie Antoinette, for a tragic interview with Monsieur Guillotine.

A CHANCE REMARK

ISAAC MERRIT SINGER was the son of a millwright and he wanted to be a machinist. So he became one, also a successful inventor. Soon he was interested in the possibilities of the sewing machine which was then being talked about. He borrowed $40 from a friend and worked for eleven days, eating only one meal and sleeping very little. He got a machine assembled, but it would not work.

Singer toiled late into the night, and, then, lost in discouragement started to go home. The friend who had lent him the money was with him. The two men walked through the streets of Boston silently. The final trouble with the machine had been too much. It would not make light stitches.

Worn out with the long strain, Singer stopped to rest on a pile of boards outside a deserted building. Suddenly the friend said "It strikes me peculiar! All the loose loops of thread were on the upper side of the cloth!"

In a flash the inventor saw the way out of the trouble. They turned at once back to the shop and Singer fumbled with the tension screw . . . it worked! His machine sewed perfect stitches.

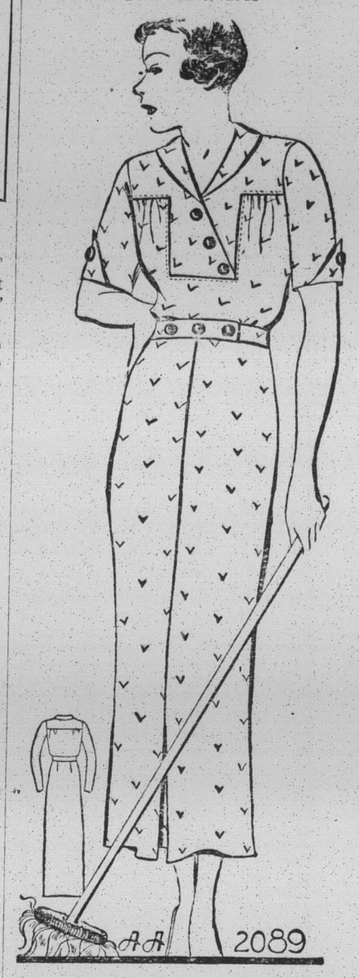
HOUSE FROCK ON TAILORED LINES

PATTERN 2089



Quite a "sweeping success," isn't it, this well-tailored house frock with its slenderizing lines and nicely detailed bodice? The skirt is fronted by a long slimming seam which breaks into a perky little kick pleat just below the knee; the bodice is gathered onto the yoke to provide ample fullness. And don't you like that vestee-like effect of the front yoke which does so much to break the width of the figure above the waistline? Buttons emphasize the trim belt, the pointed sleeve cuffs and the nice diagonal closing. Make it of any pretty cotton material, figured or plain, and you'll have a house frock to be proud of!

Pattern 2089 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3¾ yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

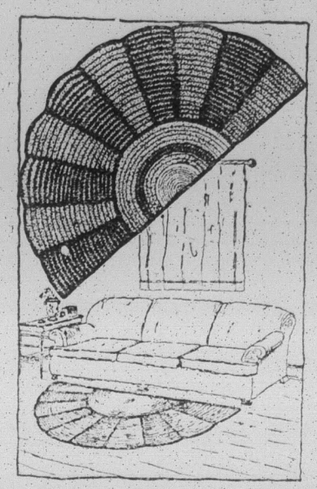
HIGHLY POPULAR "FAN" RAG RUG

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



This "Fan" rag rug has attracted a lot of attention and to our knowledge quite a few home rug makers have made one or more like it. It must be seen to be appreciated. Made up in brilliant colors, the panels in alternating light and dark shades and the center of dark green and red, this rug is bound to catch the attention of anyone upon entering the room. This model measures 58 inches across and 30 inches deep, and requires about four pounds of material to crochet. The ten panels are made first and then crocheted together. The center half circle is made to fit opening for it and in turn is slip stitched into space.

This beautiful rug is one of the twenty handmade rugs shown in colors in rug book No. 24.

If handmade rag rugs interest you send us 15c for this book of rugs with instructions, and you will receive it by mail postpaid.

New National Monument

Fort Jefferson, an abandoned fortress on Garden Key, one of the tiny Dry Tortugas isles off Florida, is our newest national monument. It was recently turned over to the national park service by the navy. This tiny place once was called "Gibraltar of America."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Wind Velocity Retards Central Asian Progress

A recent typhoon that killed 1,500 people and ravaged 400 miles of country near Tokyo was one of only 120 m. p. h., yet it was sufficient to blow down all but concrete structures like packs of cards. Recent experiments in measuring wind force have proved that the greatest recorded velocity was at Mount Washington, in Vermont. Here the wind blew at 231 m. p. h. It was so cold that the measuring instrument which recorded the speed had to be electrically heated to prevent it freezing solid.

Nevertheless, scientists believe that winds of a greater force blow across the wastes of central Asia. Rocks in this region are worn away in a few centuries, and in the past vast towns have been buried deep in sand within a few hours. The wind, in fact, is so devastating that, although the country has been populated on and off for thousands of years, little or no progress has been made.

Fostered by War

Vladivostok, at the eastern end of the world's longest railroad, owes a great part of its recent growth to the World war. Normally, before the war, the city had about 50,000 inhabitants. A recent census gives its population as 128,000. Russia maintains a huge arsenal there.
